

MOTIVES AND CONSEQUENCES OF CRITICS

Why critics is expressed?	What is attained?
The one who criticises can do everything better.                      With an aim to start dispute due to some problem.                      A person want to evade from own problems.                      To pay attention.                      Because of a bad mood.                      Because of conceit.                      Because of an aggressive mood.                      A person hates oneself at the moment.                      The desire of honour.                      To humiliate somebody.                      Because of own incapability.                      Because of envy.                      To transfer critics on the other person.                      For revenge.                      Due to bad intentions.                      Due to discontent.	Bad mood.                      Wish to defend oneself.                      Futile explanations.                      Hostile relations.                      Aggressiveness.                      Further bad mood leading to total frustration.                      Downfall of powers of any of sides.                      Insecurity.                      Indifference.                      Antithesis.                      Fear of further critics.                      Opposite effect than expected.